Mayors ride the rails

Politicians kick the tires on potential commuter line to Ottawa

TIM WIECLAWSKI
 tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

The trains are back in town, but it could be years yet before a commuter rail linking the Ottawa Valley to Ottawa is ready to roll.

Yesterday, politicians from Renfrew, Pontiac and Ottawa took a trial run along what one-day might form a regional rail line along Ottawa Central Railway tracks, from Walkley train yard to Beachburg.

The trial run, which crossed the Ottawa River at Fitzroy Harbour and Portage-du-Fort, was intended to convince local politicians of the viability of a future regional commuter train into the valley.

Rail run

The trial run was intended to expose riders to the route and duration of a trip along a future regional commuter line. Freight trains using the line currently reach speeds of 65 kilometres per hour, though a commuter line would be faster.

Before boarding yesterday, Kanata North councillor Marianne Wilkins said she was doubly interested to see how the train travelled within the city, since it could also potentially link south central Ottawa with north Kanata.

"It's not the most highly-travelled route, but it would take some of the pressure off (Highway) 417 and the Transitway," she said.

Ottawa Mayor Larry O'Brien's recent Task Force on Transportation first raised the prospect of a regional rail line. While intra-city transit has occupied city council since then, regional mayors have been examining the viability of a commuter line into Ottawa on their own.

Funding to operate the system is anticipated from federal and provincial governments, since it would be regional service, like Toronto's GO Train, and it crosses into Quebec.

Federal Transport Minister Lawrence Cannon, the Conservative Pontiac riding MP, called the project "visionary."

"Elected officials have to do everything in their power to make sure that projects like this come forward. It's good for the environment," he said.

"There are a lot of pluses here that will compel (the federal government) to look at this project very, very seriously."

But even if federal and provincial funding were to fall into place tomorrow, Harry Gow, co-founder of TransportAction Pontiac, said it could take years to upgrade the line for the speeds necessary to make it a viable commuter line.

"Right now there is a three-year program to improve the track over a major portion of the line in Pontiac County," he said.

"Ride quality is important, so is safety and by investing in the track they'll make it possible to run even faster than now, but that will take a year, maybe two."

Election 2008

Getting youth 'in the mood' electorally

PROMOTION Don't tell the Young Liberals sex and politics don't mix.

They've sent promotional kits to 60 campuses this fall with posters, pins ... and condoms, with the slogans Make Love Not A Conservative Government, Canvas Your Poll and, ahem, Stand Up For Canada.

"Hey, we're young Liberals — we can do that," says Adam Miron, head of the 10,000-strong Young Liberals of Canada who also are using YouTube clips, Twitter campaigns and interactive websites to try to put their peers in an electoral mood.

While the condoms were a hit, it remains tough to stir the political hormones of young Canadians who are delaying voting later and later, and often say they prefer single-issue lobby groups they find online to political parties they see as top-down and confusing.

In Canada, where the average party member is 59 years old and only three per cent are under 25, young politicians are an endangered species.

"We're seeing a general greying of party politics in Canada, partly because the parties aren't doing a good enough job reaching out to young people," says political science professor Bill Cross of Carleton University, co-author of a landmark study of 2,000 students that shows many don't see party politics as an effective way to make change, and the ones who do are often recruited by their parents.

Canadians are voting for the first time at a later age than their parents or grandparents, says University of Toronto professor Lawrence LeDuc.

"If the trend continues in this election, the voting rate among new voters will be the lowest it's ever been," he warned. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Trio performs first ever Everest jump

NEPAL Three skydivers made the first ever parachute jump over Mount Everest yesterday, organizers and participants said, culminating years of preparation.

Yesterday, Neil Jones of Canada, Wendy Smith of New Zealand, and Holly Budge of Britain made the leap from an aircraft flying 142 metres (465 feet) higher than Everest's summit, said Krishna Aryal, an official with Explore Himalaya, the agency that provided the logistics.

"This is the first of its kind and has never been tried before," said Aryal, who saw the jump from Syangboche in the Everest region.

All three were in freefall for nearly 30 seconds.

They used parachutes larger than normal size to help them cruise and descend fast through the thin air of the world's highest drop zone. All three wore oxygen masks.

Breast cancer survivors, friends, families raise $1.6M

TRACEY TONG

tracey.tong@metronews.ca

If Joanne Mathews has one message for women out there, it's this: "Follow your gut instinct and get checked."

Three years ago, Mathews, then 41, felt that something was wrong. Although preliminary examinations failed to detect anything, a mammogram and biopsy found that she had cancer.

The mother of four underwent first chemotherapy and radiation, followed by a bilateral mastectomy and a hysterectomy.

Yesterday, the three-year breast cancer survivor joined her 21-person team. All Together Now, and 10,000 other people to participate in the Run for the Cure at LeBreton Flats.

Now cancer-free, Mathews said she lives life to the fullest.

"I see the same survivors year after year. That lets me know that the money we raise here makes a difference."

Kelly Fry, Run For The Cure director

"I'm here for all the other women and for my daughters. Go with your gut feeling. If you have a feeling that tells you something is wrong, get checked. And young girls, watch your breasts. Early detection is what saves lives."

Participants arrived from across Ottawa-Gatineau and beyond to participate in the 15th annual run, raising $1.6 million for breast cancer research, education and awareness programs.

"This is unbelievable," run director Kelly Fry said of the total. "We're thrilled."

One in nine women will be diagnosed with breast cancer in her lifetime, said

Fry. In 2008, 5,300 women and 50 men will die of the cancer in Canada.

"I've been doing this for nine years and I see the same survivors year after year," she said.

"That lets me know that the money we raise here makes a difference."

The run is tradition for Ottawa's Maria Conca and her family, who participated in honour of Conca's sister, Richetta Montemurro, who died in 2007 at age 48 after battling the disease for eight years.

"She did this event when she was alive, and now we're carrying on the tradition," said her son, Franco.

"This is a way we can help," said Montemurro's daughter, Alyssa.

Vigil remembers impaired driving victims

TRACEY TONG

More than nine years after his son was killed, many Ottawans are familiar with Greg Thomson's story.

The Kanata resident, who is a member of the local Mothers Against Drunk Driving chapter, has been sharing the high-profile 1999 death of his son, Stan, in hopes of ending impaired driving deaths.

Stan, who was only 18, and four of his friends were out celebrating their graduation from high school when a drug-impaired driver struck their vehicle, killing them.

This past July, a new law cracking down on drugs-impaired drivers was passed. Still, what was a bit of a legacy for the boys doesn't lessen a father's pain. "It hurts just as much," said Thomson.

Dozens of people, including families and friends of victims, attended MADD's annual Candlelight Vigil of Hope and Remembrance on Parliament Hill last night.

"This is for the victims of violent crime and to show the families and friends that we care for them," said MADD Ottawa president Tom Wainwright.

Every day in Canada, impaired driving kills four people and injures 200, he said.

Protesters rally to aid Khadr

tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

Human rights activists in Ottawa yesterday called on candidates in the federal election to demand the repatriation of Omar Khadr, a Canadian citizen imprisoned at Guantanamo Bay.

In an attempt to thrust Khadr's case into the election spotlight, protesters in orange prison coveralls wore black bags over their heads at the city's Human Rights Memorial.

It was the first of a series of planned cross-country rallies yesterday by the Coalition for the Repatriation of Omar Khadr.

His supporters say that the government should bring Khadr to Canada for his trial.

"It's long past time for Omar Khadr to receive justice. That justice must take the form of being repatriated to Canada to stand (for) justice, if the evidence suggests that that is necessary, but it must be here in Canada," said Alex Neve, of Amnesty International in Canada.

Neve said the Canadian government has been silent, even after British and Australian governments requested and received repatriation of their citizens at Guantanamo.

Awaiting trial

• Khadr was 15 when captured, after being accused of throwing a grenade that killed a U.S. soldier in Afghanistan six years ago. He has since been detained at Guantanamo Bay and is awaiting trial.

Author Kerry Pither said the Canadian people must ensure the government knows people will stand up Khadr.

"The government does care what we are doing. They do care about letters, they do care about phone calls, they are paying attention," she said.

Demonstrators show their support for Omar Khadr's removal from military custody at Guantanamo Bay at the Human Rights Monument at Elgin and Lisgar streets yesterday in Ottawa.

The old rules

The CFIA confirmed that there is currently no onus on companies to alert inspectors about positive bacterial results. The change came as part of a federal decision to allow companies to write their own food safety plans, with federal approval. "If I walk in as an inspector, the plant doesn't come up to me and say, 'We had positive tests today,'" said Tom Graham, the food safety agency's national inspection manager. But he says the reporting rule will likely be reinstated as a result of the current federal investigation into the Maple Leaf outbreak.

Tradition Preparing for Yom Kippur

Ultra-Orthodox Jewish boys hold chickens during Kaparat yesterday in Jerusalem, ahead of Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement, which starts at sundown Wednesday. Kaparat is an ancient custom connected to Yom Kippur, where white chickens are slaughtered as a symbolic gesture of atonement. The slaughtered chickens are then donated to the poor.

ScienceMatters

David Suzuki & Dr. Faisal Moola

Andrew Weaver's recently published book, Keeping Our Cool: Canada In A Warming World, is an urgent call to action that some of the folks running for the privilege of leading us into the future seem to be ignoring.

Weaver, a world-class climatologist who is putting the University of Victoria on the global map, was one of the lead authors on papers put out by the UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change. In that role, he shared the Nobel Peace Prize last year with other panel members.

In the book, Weaver argues that if we are to stabilize atmospheric levels of carbon at a level that will not result in climate going haywire, we must begin massive reductions in greenhouse gas emissions now with a goal of totally eliminating our output of them. If we don't, 80 per cent of all species could become extinct! That's an astounding prediction, and if we think we'll somehow survive such a catastrophic crisis, we should think again.

When I first read about colonies of honeybees dying out, a bolt of fear went through me. Without pollinators, most flowering plants will not survive, and that would devastate the makeup of species on the planet.

We have become the dominant animal on the planet, and it has been an amazing story. But in puffing ourselves up with self-importance, we have lost sight of how little we know about the way the world works and how utterly dependent we are on the services that nature performs for us, like removing carbon dioxide from the air and replacing it with oxygen — not a bad service for animals like us.

Eminent Harvard ecologist and ant expert E.O. Wilson once told me that if humans disappeared overnight, only a handful of organisms would also go extinct: Creatures that live on our skin, in our armpits, and our groins and guts. The rest of nature would rebound, the planet would green up, and animals would increase in abundance. But if all the ants went extinct overnight, whole terrestrial ecosystems would collapse, and the makeup of animals and plants would change catastrophically. Kind of puts humans into perspective.

We apparently now put health as one of our top priorities in this election. Well, when we use air, water, and land as a garbage can, do we think we are somehow immune to the health consequences?

We've got to see the world as it really is — a complex interaction of air, water, land, and living things, all interconnected and all interdependent.

We are rampaging across the planet, treating it as our plaything, as our source of raw materials, as our dumping ground for our waste and emissions. And then we whine like mad when reminded that we have to change and we have to pay for what we do. Why haven't we heard more about this perspective in the current election campaign?

Peru a climate riddle as world heats up

Scientists are using everything from a yellow submarine to weather balloons and special airplanes to solve a climate conundrum: Why is Peru getting colder while the rest of the world heats up?

Researchers from Europe, the United States and South America started collecting reams of data last week from clouds, the shoreline and deep underwater to try to figure out the dynamics of the southeastern Pacific.

"Peru has a very important role in global climate," said Alexis Chaigneau, a French scientist leading experiments in Peru. "Over the past 50 years, the Peruvian coast has gotten colder, mainly because of stronger winds that have pulled up the deep cold waters of the ocean current."

The Humboldt current, which flows north to Peru from the frigid southern waters off Chile, is considered the world's most productive marine ecosystem, in part because deep cold waters rich in nutrients interact with the sun's energy to create life. For the next three months, everything from a small satellite-controlled submarine to cloud-hugging airplanes will feed computers with information on oxygen levels in the water, temperature, salinity, wind speeds and current.

Along the way, they also hope to solve the riddles of the famous El Niño and La Niña weather phenomenon that occur in the southeastern Pacific.

Sponsored venues facing identity crisis

Performance venues love blockbuster events, but not the kind that are currently affecting their naming-rights partners.

The takeovers of big banks like Washington Mutual (WaMu) and Wachovia are forcing venues with long-term naming-rights deals with these institutions to grapple with unexpected branding challenges. Some even face the prospect of losing a partner at a time when replacing one lucrative naming-rights deal with another could be a difficult task at best.

The WaMu Theater at Madison Square Garden in New York, the WaMu Theater at Qwest Field in Seattle, the Wachovia Center in Philadelphia and the Wachovia Arena in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., are among the venues being forced to deal with the fallout of the financial crisis.

Millions of dollars are spent positioning and branding arenas and theaters, so a name change creates unwanted headaches. REUTERS

U.S. job cuts boost fears of recession

"The problems of Wall Street have now hit Main Street with full force."

Charles Schumer

The Labour Department report showed 760,000 jobs lost so far in 2008. The unemployment rate in September held at a five-year high of 6.1 per cent as 121,000 people quit the workforce.

The bleak hiring outlook and a separate report showing a sluggish service sector that barely grew last month added to a string of recent negative news, including weak personal income and spending, declines in manufacturing and declining factory orders and shipments.

"The problems of Wall Street have now hit Main Street with full force," the chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, Sen. Charles Schumer of New York, said ahead of the U.S. House of Representatives' vote to approve a $700 billion US rescue package for banks and other financial firms.

Italian Prime Minister

Silvio Berlusconi was quoted as saying Italy would revive the idea of a common bailout fund for European banks at a meeting of finance ministers in Luxembourg today.

Germany shot back that it remained opposed to any such pooled funding for European bank rescues like the $700-billion US bailout approved last week by the United States.

But Germany said it would guarantee more than 500 billion euros in deposits in German banks to protect savers from the worst global financial crisis since the 1930s. Austria quickly followed suit.

The deposit guarantee by Germany, Europe's largest economy, seemed certain to raise the stakes for other EU members to match its terms and to restart a debate about Europe's fragmented response to the credit crisis.

German officials clinched a rescue deal for lender Hypo Real Estate, Belgium and Luxembourg found a buyer for Fortis in BNP Paribas, and UniCredit, Italy's second-biggest bank, announced plans to raise new capital. REUTERS

THE SKINNY: After only two regular season games, do the Ottawa Senators have a goaltending controversy brewing?

THE UNUSUAL: Goalie Alex Auld was perfect in net and was headed for a shutout in his Ottawa debut until Alex Goligoski scored for Pittsburgh with less than two seconds remaining in regulation.

THE GOAL SCORERS: Dany Heatley got a pair of power-play markers. Antoine Vermette scored the third Sens goal. Goligoski was the only Penguin to find the back of the net.

THE RATING: Three stars. Ottawa had a decent performance but the game would have been more interesting if Pittsburgh's power play had connected on one or two of their seven opportunities.

Ottawa Senators forward Antoine Vermette, right, scores on Pittsburgh Penguins goalkeeper Marc-Andre Fleury during their NHL hockey game at Globen Arena in Stockholm yesterday.

THE RUMBLING: With only five goals in two games — and going a measly 1-14 on the power play — have the Penguins lost some of their offensive lustre for last year?

THE NEXT GAME: The Senators return to Canada having earned three of a possible four points during the start to their NHL season in Sweden, and will begin preparations for their first home game this Saturday night at Scotiabank Place when they host the defending Stanley Cup champion Detroit Red Wings. Pittsburgh returns to action at home on Saturday night against the New Jersey Devils.

Jimmy 'The Iceman' cometh

OddJobs

Diane Peters

It's a little known fact that two, not one, hockey-related stars have come out of Brantford, Ont.

You've probably seen one of them — his name is Wayne — work his magic. Less likely, you've watched Jimmy MacNeil and his ice-related skills.

For 20 years, 47-year-old MacNeil has been a certified ice technician. Most call him a Zamboni driver. (Olympia also makes ice resurfacers, but Zamboni is the name that's stuck.)

He rose to fame back in 1999 when the Zamboni Company went on the hunt for the Zamboni Driver of the Year. MacNeil triumphed in the Internet competition partly thanks to the support of factory staff at the Zamboni factory in Brantford. After winning his title, "The Iceman" MacNeil got a lot of exposure on TV and radio. He also drove a Zamboni across Canada in 2001 and raised $1 million for the Canadian Hockey Association.

This was not his original career plan. He studied history at Sir Wilfrid Laurier University in Waterloo, Ont., and planned to become a teacher. But after graduation, his father became ill and needed help with his mechanic business.

At the time, Alex MacNeil was one of the few who could fix ice resurfacers. So father and son kept busy visiting arenas in southern Ontario and the northern U.S. MacNeil wasn't the greatest apprentice mechanic, but he loved arenas.

"There's a certain aura about it. The cold, the smell of the popcorn and the hot dogs. If you want to meet a lot of happy people just having fun, just go to an ice rink," he says.

After five years of helping his dad, MacNeil got a job driving an ice resurfacer in a nearby township. He started taking courses to get certified and three years later started driving for the Brantford and District Civic Centre.

Every hour, MacNeil — or one of the other three drivers at the arena — drives the Zamboni onto the ice. He guides the machine through its job of shaving a layer of ice away and spraying a coating of water over the surface, which refreezes smooth and clean. He frequently measures the thickness of the ice and uses slush to do serious repairs.

The other 50 minutes of every hour he's on shift, MacNeil helps run the arena by checking on the refrigeration system, tidying up and doing odd jobs.

Although the kids at the rink today have no memory of The Iceman, they often ask for his autograph.

"There's something so unique and cool and fun about watching this machine take all that snow

Report cards can be stressful for families

The first report card of the school year is almost here. It's an important milestone in the school year, but the waiting and the wondering can be very stressful for families. After all, the report card's imminent arrival could mean some potentially shocking and unpleasant surprises.

For students, a bad grade on the report card could mean punishment and restrictions on extra-curricular activities.

For parents, poor grades are a source of concern and worry — is their child facing an educational roadblock that could put dreams and plans for the future on hold? Or worse, eliminate possibilities for the future altogether?

Adding to the stress is the fact that for most families, report cards can be confusing. Changing curriculum and reporting standards mean that the report card is filled with jargon and terms that mean essentially nothing to a parent.

"Report Cards today are not the same report cards that parents remember from when they were children, which can make reading report cards an exercise in frustration," said Dr. Nick Whitehead, founder of Oxford Learning.

"Reporting requirements have changed a lot and to make matters worse, report cards seem like they are written in gobbledygook. It just makes them that much more confusing."

Typically, report cards are upheld as the ultimate indicator of student progress — but they do have their limitations. The report card is but a single snapshot of a child's progress up to a given point and is not a complete picture of a child's potential. Whitehead recommends that parents consider the first report card of the year as warning sign; if there are any issues with poor grades, take action now.

Report card tips

- Sit down and review together. Make sure that there are no distractions so you can focus on one another and the conversation.
- Don't get upset. If you're upset or angry about grades, hold the discussion until you can speak calmly and rationally.
- Start with empathetic and positive comments. Highlight something positive about the report card, no matter how trivial. For instance, "we are pleased with your spelling grade."
- Listen. Recognize your child's struggles. School can be tough. It is helpful to students to know that someone is listening to their concerns.

NEWS CANADA

"Parents need to remember that there is still plenty of time to get back on track. It's a key thing to remember and it can greatly reduce report card stress," said Whitehead.

DeGrassi rings the bell

High school drama enrolls new students

As DeGrassi: The Next Generation rolls into its eighth season, it's introducing, well, a next generation.

A fresh new class of brainy Grade 9 overachievers is among the changes coming this season (which premiered last night on CTV) on a series that continues to chronicle teen angst and channel it out to millions of acne-obsessed fans around the globe.

With seven seasons in the can, long-time executive producer Linda Schuyler said the show's creative team "decided to stir up the school right from its very heart."

"It's almost like seven years is a generation. One of the things we were thinking about as we went out to plan our Season 8 was to bring new life into the school," she said.

"I don't think there's been a year since the first season that we were so committed to such a big influx of younger students. We've introduced one or two here or there, but this is a big influx of students and we were very committed to having a strong presence of the ninth graders," Schuyler said of the decision to bring in nine new faces. The eighth season will also follow the tribulations of dorm life for three veteran cast members who've graduated to Smithdale College.

Another big change is the replacement of level-headed principal Mrs. Hatzilakos with a new guy, The Shep, a brash, football-loving jock whose disdain for scholarly pursuits will put him at odds with the existing administration.

Producers are also working on a story arc that takes some of the cast members to Hollywood, where they'll hook up with two long-time DeGrassi fanatics, director/actor Kevin Smith and sidekick Jason Mewes (who've previously appeared on the series).

Much of the advance work on the Hollywood segments has already been shot at various locations around Toronto, said Ste-fan Brogren, who starred in the original series and has since returned as a regular, teacher Mr. Simpson.

"We doubled Toronto for Hollywood for a lot of it. It's amazing what a couple of palm trees can do," said Brogren.

But it still means a four-day "guerrilla" shoot in Los Angeles to capture images of those places that are "so iconically Hollywood," he said.

I have seen the light: It's purple

HineSight

Anne Hines

I'm a great believer in inspirational sayings. Little phrases that sum up what life's truly about and the attitude you want to bring to it. Like, "When life gives you lemons, break out the gin and tonic." Or "I'm worth it. At least once it goes on sale."

Until recently, I've lived life by one deeply truthful saying. "That which does not kill me, makes me whinier."

But now, I've seen the light. And it's purple. I was flipping television channels on the kind of night when you realize that if you're watching Yugoslavian women's volleyball finals it means you're just too tired to go to bed. I came across one of those southern Baptist evangelical preaching shows. I love those shows. The world seems a simpler place when you take out all those confusing issues like choice and thinking.

Anyway, this minister was promoting a new purple bracelet campaign. He explained that what's wrong with the world isn't poverty, violence, injustice or not being able to take a deep breath twenty years from now. Apparently, what's wrong is that we all complain too much.

If we had to move a bracelet from one wrist to the other every time we complained would we stop doing it altogether?

Complaints are bad. They are "peace harmers." You see, this is where this program is helpful because previously I thought they were opinions.

So, what we do is order one of these purple plastic bracelets, which I did, and every time we complain we move the bracelet from one wrist to the other.

This is supposed to train us not to complain any more, which sounds easy but it's actually really hard. You see? That was complaining. I have to move my bracelet.

A woman on the TV program said that she managed not to complain for a month. Unfortunately, her husband told her she was no fun. It didn't say if she was fun before that. Some people aren't. Wait. Is that complaining? I have to move the bracelet. But maybe it's just telling the truth. I should move it back. This is complicated. Shoot. I have to move it again.

This is making me nuts. Shoot. Other wrist. And, isn't complaining sometimes "peace enhancing"? Letting off steam is all that gets us through some of life's trickiest situations, like driving in traffic or attending family gatherings. At least without police intervention.

I'm moving the bracelet. To the trash bin. But it's amazing how well that thing worked. I feel more peaceful already.

Anne Hines is an author and humour writer. She has written three novels and one collection of nonfiction humour.

She's the Prairie-born daughter of devoutly religious parents whom she can't help but deviate from. Her variance only increases when she moves to England to care for her grandmother shortly before World War II breaks out. # Book clubs blend love of reading with socializing

BY RAF BRUSILOV for Metro Canada

Reading may be a private experience but sharing its joys doesn't have to be.

Book clubs can be a great way to combine a love for books with a fun social setting that lets you celebrate great books by probing their depths with like-minded people.

Lisa Huie, spokesperson for Indigo Books & Music Inc., says book clubs have evolved into full-fledged intellectual escapes shared by adults with a love of reading, a far cry from the after-school homework crowd.

"They've become a really great social activity that connects people with common interests," Huie said.

The growth in popularity of book clubs in recent years certainly owes a debt to daytime host and admitted book-lover Oprah Winfrey, who almost single-handedly resurrected the practice in the mid-1990s with her own book club segment on her popular talk show.

A new survey by Indigo shows Fall is the biggest reading season as the colder weather starts to push people and their activity plans indoors, where according to the survey 72 per cent of book club meetings happen. The survey also found an average book club has eight members and reads roughly eight books per year.

If you plan to start your own book club, Huie suggests planning ahead but keeping it mostly casual. "You do want to have a bit of structure, but keep things open enough to include everybody's opinion."

Other tips:

- Make sure your book list is selected democratically — allow every member to choose at least one book for the club to read.
- Aim for ambience and comfort: candles, comfortable seating and plenty of tea will go a long way to keep members relaxed.
- Offer munchies — themed, if possible. How about a buffet of healthy, savoury treats for a session on Michael Pollan's In Defense of Food?

U.S., Canadian debates face off

ARGUING FOR DOLLARS: Scheduling the English leaders' debate the same night that the U.S. vice-presidential candidates faced off might have been a dumb move, but it was a typically Canadian one, kind of like putting an Air Force special up against the season finale of Lost, complaining that there was, of course, never a chance in hell of comparable ratings, and even taking perverse pride in the humiliation as a Canadian identity-building exercise.

You had to admire the Pollyannaish pluck of Steve Paikin, moderator of the Canadian debate, just before the credits began rolling, when he blurted out that "This was way better than Biden and Palin, I'm sure of it!" The funny thing was that he was kinda right.

The formats couldn't have been more different — a stately stand-up at dueling podiums that allowed candidates to state and re-state their positions and respond at length versus a roundtable pile-on that resembled the family dinner you're still trying to forget more than any coherent discussion.

Anyone who still cherishes the self-serving but deluded myth that Canadians are more civil than our American neighbours — which is to say anyone who's never witnessed the medieval bear-baiting that is Question Period on Parliament Hill — should have had that definitively debunked after Thursday night.

Every candidate seemed to have gone in with some folksy catchphrase or gotcha punchline loaded and chambered: "You panicked!" "I call that the ultimate bridge to nowhere." "Laissez-faire, I don't care." "Joe Six-Pack, hockey moms." "I want my Canada back!" "Say it ain't so, Joe!" It was like they were competing to write gags for the

By the end, though, I'd gotten bored with the U.S. debates as candidates Joe Biden and Sarah Palin started to sound like tired fighters swinging blindly at each other.

inevitable Saturday Night Live or Rick Mercer parody to come, though the fact that SNL had theirs ready to air two days later is probably an endorsement of private versus publicly funded broadcasting.

Bloc Québécois leader Gilles Duceppe had no real reason to be there except protocol, but his stinging observation that at least he wasn't under any illusion that he'd be prime minister one day — unlike the other three candidates not named Harper — was a welcome shaft of clarity and light through a fog of rhetoric and slap-fighting.

Sarah Palin might not have deprived Tina Fey of any material to work with, but she blew past any idea that she's a lightweight on the campaign trail, and Joe Biden probably regretted his apparent decision not to risk coming off as a bully.

By the end, though, I'd gotten bored with the U.S. debates as the candidates started to sound like tired fighters swinging blindly at each other, while the Canadian debates remained gripping — if horrifying — theatre right till the end.

The fact that I was able to watch both — viewing one live and TiVoing the other for later, with pauses to replay, write notes and hit the john — instead of making a hard choice between the two did, however, make me long for the pre-VHS, 8-channel dawn-of-cable world of the '70s, a near-luddite nostalgia for which I was completely unprepared.

Jackson puts off three more shows

HEALTH Singer Janet Jackson has postponed three more shows on her North American tour as she continues to recover from an undisclosed illness, BBC News Online reports.

Her weekend concerts in North Carolina and Georgia have been put off, along with Tuesday's gig in Florida. The 42-year-old arrived in the town of Greensboro on Saturday, but was advised by a doctor not to perform. Jackson went to hospital in Montreal last Monday after becoming "suddenly ill" during a concert sound check. She was discharged two hours later.

The Cho Show

Enough, already. The world does not need another "days-in-the-life-of" series. Nothing against Margaret Cho; she's still a funny lady with an interesting take on life, the universe and everything. But wouldn't you rather watch her do a stand-up routine than sit through the mundanities of her offstage life? Unless you're gung-ho for Cho, this show is a no. 10 PM on 46 COM

Heroes

Seeing a future where nearly everyone has abilities, a world destined for destruction, Peter (Milo Ventimiglia) resolves to prevent this earth-shattering end — whatever the cost — and takes on a dark, unwieldy ability to save the world. Meanwhile, after Hiro and Ando (Masi Oka, James Kyson Lee) allow Angela's (Cristine Rose) half of the formula to be stolen, they set out to uncover the identity of the villain who hired Daphne (Brea Grant). 9 PM on 9 NBC 3 GTV

Miller getting over her fears

CELEBRITY Sienna Miller has conquered her phobia of watching herself on screen, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

"I used to be a lot more uncomfortable with watching myself on screen," the actress says. "You just have to relate it to when you hear your voice back on a tape machine and go, 'Oh God!' Multiply that by about 10,000 when you're watching yourself on a big screen. Now I try and be a lot more objective. There are certain bits that you look at and go, 'Eugh!' but I think it's almost more narcissistic to be like that. I'm trying to see it as a collaborative piece of work."

Miller also said she has no intention of slowing down, and intends to star in as many movies as possible.

"So everything is busy at the moment, and fortunately I seem to have limitless amounts of energy," she says. "I don't know how I do it, but I can just keep going."

Pink's dating drought

DATING Pink "never" goes on dates, femalefirst.co.uk reports. The singer, who separated from husband Carey Hart earlier this year, prefers to meet men in less pressurized situations.

"I meet boys all over the place. It's just that I don't ever go on dates. I have never been on a date. I don't believe in that, it has to be organic. A barbecue, a show or whatever. I have never met anybody in a bar," she says.

However, Pink also revealed she has a number of friends who are attempting to persuade her to start dating. "Lately I have been hearing from a lot of people, like married couples, who have met in a bar," she says. "I'm always amazed. So maybe that is where I am going wrong."

Bundchen supporting her family

FAMILY Supermodel Gisele Bündchen sends as much as $10 million US back to her family in Brazil, imdb.com reports. Friends tell Star magazine she sends more than a third of that back to her na-

Halliwell wants a baby with her new boyfriend

FAMILY Geri Halliwell wants a baby with her dancer boyfriend, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The former Spice Girl, who already has two-year-old daughter Bluebell Madonna with scriptwriter Sacha Gervasi, is keen to have a child with Ivan "Flipz" Velez, but is reportedly prepared to be a single mother again if their relationship ends.

"She wants a second child soon and says that if she falls pregnant with Flipz then it wouldn't be a problem," a source says. "At the moment they are besotted with each other and Flipz is keen on having a child with her."

Halliwell, who began dating Velez after he worked as a backing dancer on the Spice Girls reunion tour, is confident her beau will make a great father because he has bonded so well with Bluebell.

"He wants to be a permanent fixture in her life and Geri loves the fact he gets on so well with Bluebell," the source added. "She's got a perfect family unit and a baby would be the icing on the cake."

Baron Cohen strikes again

FILM Comedian Sacha Baron Cohen was ejected from a catwalk show during Paris Fashion Week in France on Friday, after climbing on stage and attempting to slip a note to the models, imdb.com reports.

Cohen is filming scenes for his new movie Bruno: Delicious Journeys Through America for the Purpose of Making Heterosexual Males Visibly Uncomfortable in the Presence of a Gay Foreigner in a Mesh T-Shirt.

Dressed as his camp alter-ego Bruno, he attempted to carry out his latest stunt at the Jc De Castebajac show — scenes which are suspected to feature in his forthcoming comedy.

But he suffered a setback when the models and audience ignored his presence and continued despite the disturbance. Staff promptly ejected Cohen, in what is his fourth attempt to disrupt a fashion show.

Dressed as Bruno, Cohen twice crashed shows at Madrid Fashion Week in Spain and was also thrown out of a show in Milan, Italy last week after storming the runway and strutting along the catwalk — prompting organizers to call the police.

LIFESTYLE Elizabeth Hurley has gone country, People.com reports.

Inspired by her life with husband Arun Nayar and son Damian, 6, on their bio-dynamic farm in the English countryside, the actress-model, 43, tells People, she is "developing a line of products ... with a view that they're not only going to be healthy, because they're organic, but I'm obsessed that women find alternatives to eat which are low in fat."

She says her organic farm produces low-fat products, which may help reduce the risk of breast cancer.

"This makes no sense at all..."

by Joe O'Neill

One of the more inspiring ongoing sagas of modern times is the valiant struggle of ex-Spice Girl Geri Halliwell to remain somewhat relevant.

The latest news finds the utterly talent-deprived gorgon in the news for, uh, maybe wanting to have a baby with her kind of boyfriend who's also a good dancer.

OK, Geri, I get that you think this "Flipz" guy will make a great parent because he "bonds" so well with the unfortunately named child you already had with old Whathisnamewhocares, but maybe you and the Flipster should start with something that isn't a living, breathing, human being as a token of how much you sort of dig each other.

Like, say, buttock tattoos of one other's names rendered in Chinese characters. Or perhaps his 'n hers "I'm With Stupid" t-shirts.

What's that you say? Tattoos and t-shirts aren't quite the "icing on the cake" that a baby is?

Well, you've got me there, but I tend to think you'd be better off actually being physically ground into a granular paste, spread on a bunt cake, and eaten by Hannibal Lecter, than being the child of any parent egocentric enough to speak of you as icing on her cake.

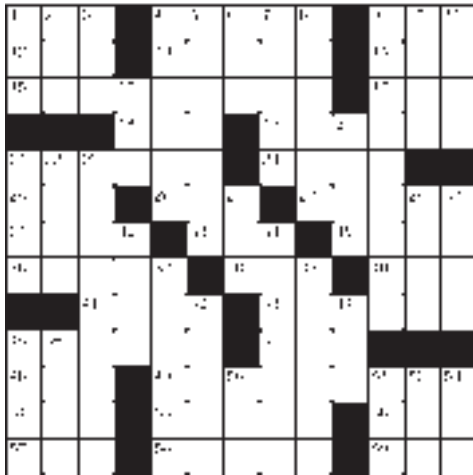

Especially if her name is Geri and she makes you listen to her old albums.

I'm fairly certain that the words, "Your honour, Geri Halliwell is my mother," would go a long way toward absolving you of any criminal responsibility for crimes you may commit in life, even if they were to involve an automatic weapon and a bell tower.

- Preheat barbecue or oven broiler. Put lamb into large bowl. Add carrot, onion, bread crumbs, nutmeg and thyme, and season with salt and pepper. Mix well. Add egg and mix

- Divide mixture into 4 patties. Brush both sides of burgers with oil, then cook for 4 to 5 minutes per side.
- For relish, cut peel and pith from orange with a sharp knife, and holding it over a bowl to catch juice, cut between membranes to release segments. Roughly chop segments and add them to juice. Add raspberries and sugar, lightly crushing fruit with fork to mix.
- Split English muffins and toast lightly. Put a lamb burger on each muffin, add lettuce to garnish and a spoonful of relish. Serve with remaining relish.
